

PREFACE

This monograph is a collation of research on Late Bronze Age Egyptian-type pottery in the southern Levant that I conducted during the last ten years. An earlier stage of my investigation appears in my unpublished Ph.D. dissertation, submitted to Vienna University (Austria) in 2005. Since receiving my Ph.D. I have published a number of articles on this topic and extended my inquiries to additional sites and to further aspects of the pottery under review.

The person who made this entire endeavor possible is Professor Manfred Bietak (Vienna University; Austrian Academy of Sciences, Vienna). Professor Bietak supported me from the outset of my journey into scholarship in 1993. He introduced me to field archaeology and ceramic studies and nurtured my interest in the relationship between Egypt and Canaan. He was my M.A. and Ph.D. advisor and financed the research and publication of this volume. I want to express my deepest appreciation and gratitude to this extraordinary scholar. My cordial thanks are further directed to Professor Israel Finkelstein (Tel Aviv University), with whom I have had the honor to work in the excavations at Megiddo since 1998. Professor Finkelstein was the second advisor of my Ph.D. dissertation. He was generous in sharing with me his broad knowledge of the archaeology of the Land of the Bible. Beyond that, I am deeply indebted to Doctor David Aston (Austrian Academy of Sciences, Vienna), who provided me with the tools to study the material presented here. He introduced me to Egyptian pottery typology, chronology and ware analysis both as tutor and as friend.

Moreover, I am grateful to all the scholars who entrusted me with the publication of Egyptian ceramic assemblages from various south Levantine sites (Beth-Shean, Tel Aphek, Tel Mor, Ashkelon, Tel Sera^c and Tel Dan). These include Prof. Amihai Mazar (the Institute of Archaeology, Hebrew University of Jerusalem), Prof. Eliezer D. Oren (Ben-Gurion University of the Negev, Beersheba), Prof. Larry E. Stager (the Harvard Semitic Museum, Harvard University), Dr. Yuval Gadot (the Institute of Archaeology of Tel Aviv University), Dr. Tristan Barako (Shelby White – Leon Levy Archaeological Publications Program) and Dr. Rachel Ben-Dov (Hebrew Union College – Jewish Institute of Religion, Jerusalem).

I reserve special gratitude to Prof. Eliezer D. Oren, Prof. Richard Zettler (Penn Museum), Prof. Larry E. Stager, Dr. Yuval Gadot, Dr. Ayelet Gilboa (the Department of Archaeology, University of Haifa) and Dr. Ilan Sharon (the Institute of Archaeology, Hebrew University of Jerusalem), who gave their permission to present previously unpublished vessels in this volume.

Special thanks go to Yaniv Agmon, Dr. John D.M. Green, Dr. Karin Kopetzky, Dr. Nava Panitz-Cohen, Dr. Valentine Roux, Yossi Salmon and Ragna Stidsing, who generously contributed chapters to this volume. My warmest thanks go to Myrna Pollak, who edited the manuscript, and to Dr. Angela Schwab, the production editor. Yulia Gottlieb kindly supported me in the enhancement of drawings and in the arrangement of the plates at the end of the book.

Additional thanks go to the institutions that granted me the permission to reproduce already published drawings of Egyptian-type pottery: the University of Pennsylvania Museum of Archaeology and Anthropology, Philadelphia (Penn Museum); the Harvard Semitic Museum, Harvard University; the British Museum, London; the American Schools of Oriental Research; the Israel Antiquities Authority; the Israel Exploration Society; the Israel Museum, Jerusalem; the Institute of Archaeology, Hebrew University of Jerusalem; the Institute of Archaeology of Tel Aviv University; the Department of Archaeology, University of Haifa; the Archaeology Department, Ben-Gurion University of the Negev; and the Nelson Glueck School of Biblical Archaeology of the Hebrew Union College – Jewish Institute of Religion in Jerusalem.

To Eran Arie, Prof. Trude Dothan, Prof. Orly Goldwasser, Dr. Robert Mullins, Dr. Nava Panitz-Cohen and Alegre Savariego go my sincere thanks for their endless patience in various discussions. Last but not least, endless love and appreciation go to my family and especially to my wife, Meyrav, who accompanied me on this scholarly adventure with constant support and utmost enthusiasm.
