

Acknowledgements

This volume is the result of the fruitful interaction and collaboration of American and European scholars from the fields of history, literature and culture, who meet regularly at the biennial EAAS and the traditional meetings of the Southern Studies Forum. Ties of friendship have developed over the years and have greatly supported the preparation of the International Colloquium on which this volume is based.

Yet, this book would not have been possible without the help of various institutions and individuals. The editors are particularly grateful for the generous support they have received from the Austrian Academy of Sciences and the British Academy, under whose aegis the Colloquium took place in September 2006. The munificence of the two Academies ensured the participation of a considerable number of prominent experts in the field of Southern Studies interested in the transatlantic cultural exchange, an interaction which has in various ways fertilized both Southern literature and the national literatures of numerous European countries. Many European authors and filmmakers have been inspired by Southern novelists while European intellectuals, philosophers and writers have in turn contributed to the cross-fertilization of literature rooted in the American South.

The two editors of this volume would like to express their gratitude to the two Academies for sponsoring the Colloquium, and specifically to the Austrian Academy of Sciences for providing the necessary funds for the publication of this substantial volume. The Cultural Office of the City of Vienna, the Dean of the Faculty of Philological and Cultural Studies at the University of Vienna, and the U.S. Embassy in Vienna similarly supported the Colloquium and thus helped scholars from both sides of the Atlantic to engage in this joint analysis of the complex transatlantic exchange.

The editors of this volume also appreciate the promptness with which the contributors submitted their essays, and they acknowledge the support by the administrators and the staff of the Academy and the professional skills of its publishing house. Thanks are also due to the members of the small team in Vienna who assisted in the time-consuming task of preparing the proceedings through painstaking research, the necessary reformatting and proofreading: Elisabeth Damböck, Monika Fahrnberger, Christina Fuchs, Judith Geng, Evelyne Goger, Katharina Mewald and Nicole Semmelrock. A grant for a research project on the transatlantic exchange by the Austrian Science Fund has supported and thus greatly facilitated this stage of the work, which is thus gratefully acknowledged.

On a more personal note, Richard Gray would like to thank his friend and colleague of many years, Waldemar Zacharasiewicz, for being the perfect host and an ideal collaborator; the project would never have been brought to fruition without his organisational skills and commitment. He would also like to thank his family for their help and support at every stage of the project, and in particular his wife Sheona.

In similar vein Waldemar Zacharasiewicz would like to express his gratitude to Richard Gray for this most fruitful and enjoyable collaboration. Not only is he a prolific scholar of great critical acumen, but he is also always willing to generously share his knowledge and insights with his friends and fellow academics.

Richard Gray,
Waldemar Zacharasiewicz