

79 (p. 200)

View into the Bâ valley with the Gyu-par range in the distance, as seen from a bluff south, elevation 10400 ft, looking north north-west. Willows along the streambed in the valley. Near the foot of the eroded loess cliffs are two Tibetan villages called Sa-og-rong-wa. The tussock forming plants in the immediate foreground are Caragana tibetica Kom.

80 (p. 206)

Tshang-rgyur mGo-logs at their encampment west of the Yellow River, opposite Ra-gya Gom-pa. The left one was on the point of taking a pinch of snuff, the latter consists of the ashes of burnt yak dung. They wear one single sheepskin garment (tanned by softening and rubbing it with butter).