

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The author is very grateful to a long list of institutions and individuals, who have supported his work at different stages and who have believed in its success. The author sincerely hopes there is no one he forgot to mention. His thanks go to the following<sup>1</sup>:

Tsering Gyalpo (former director of the Religious Department of the Tibetan Academy of Social Sciences (TASS) in Lhasa), who passed away in 2015, for scientific support; Dr. Christian Jahoda (ISA / ÖAW) and Dr. Guntram Hazod (ISA / ÖAW) for scientific support on Tibet and for review of the text on West Tibetan and Central Tibetan history of Chapter I, respectively; Prof. Franz Ottner (IAG / BOKU) for mineral analysis supervision and review of Chapter III and the geology section of Chapter IV; Dr. Doris Österreicher (BOKU) for review of Chapter III; Prof. Erich Lehner (TUW) for scientific support and review of the Preliminaries; Mag. Thomas Hofmann (GBA) for providing maps of the research area; Dr. Barbara Götsch (ISA / ÖAW) for scientific support; Mag. Mathias Fermer (IKGA / ÖAW) and Tsering Drongshar (IKGA / ISA / ÖAW) for proof reading of selected Tibetan terms; Tsering Drongshar and Dr. Calum Blaikie (ISA / ÖAW) for scientific support; M. Arch Randolph Langenbach, who inspired me to research composite constructions in Chapter IV; Dr. Karin Wriesnig (IAG / BOKU) for mineral analysis support; Roland Meingast for consultation in clay technical matters; Dr. Christiane Kalantari (ISA / ÖAW) for scientific support on Tibetan art; Helene Pfalz-Schwingenschlögl (IAG / BOKU) for taking pictures of clay samples; Prof. Monika Kriechbaum (BOKU) and Prof. Marianne Kohler-Schneider (BOKU) for scientific support in Tibetan botany and archaeobotany; BA. Jakob Gredler (BOKU), Dr. Martin Mergili (IAG / BOKU) and BA. Jürgen Schörflinger (ISA / ÖAW) for their support with GIS maps; DI. Ferenc Zamolyi (TUW) and Martin Pospichal (TUW) for their assistance in CAD and rendering.

For local information, besides many others (see Correspondence and Interviewees in Chapter VIII), thanks belong to Jampa Kelsang (zhépön living in Lhasa), Penba Tashi (living in Lhasa), Nyema Tashi (living in Lhasa), Tashi (potter from Barab in Tibet), Donchog Tsering (clay sculptor from Lhasa), Wangchuk (ASI Jammu and Kashmir Chapter in Leh), Muhammad Saleem Beeg (INTACH Kashmir Chapter), Dechen Lundup (from Tabo in India), Dorje Tsering (from Keylong in India), David Holler (living in Lhasa), Sonam Wangchuk and Rebecca Norman (living in Ladakh), Tsewang Norbu (blacksmith and stove maker from Ne in Ladakh), Rigzen Wangyal (potter from Likir in Ladakh) and, last but not least, Tsering Norbu (from Likir in Ladakh).

For organisational support, the author is thankful to the team of the interlibrary loan at the TUW. For editing photos, thanks go to Mag. Mehmet Emir (ISA / ÖAW), and for proof reading, thanks go to MA. Jessica Sloan-Leitner and Mag. Hermeline Steiner.

For institutional support, the author is thankful to the Institute for Applied Geology (IAG) at the Vienna University of Natural Resources and Life Sciences (BOKU), the Institute for Social Anthropology (ISA) at the Austrian Academy of Sciences (ÖAW), the Institute of History of Art, Building Archaeology and Restoration at the Vienna University of Technology (TUW), the Geologische Bundesanstalt (GBA) in Vienna and the Archaeological Survey of India (ASI).

<sup>1</sup> Affiliations as mentioned below are given according to the time of research and may have changed in the meantime.

Some projects contributed to the success of this publication by supporting research and making data available. This includes the FWF (Austrian Science Fund) project P 21806, “Society, power and religion in pre-modern Western Tibet” (10/2009 – 09/2014); project P 25066-G19, “The Burial Mounds of Central Tibet” (01/2013 – 02/2017); and project P 30393-G25, “The Burial Mounds of Central Tibet, Part II” (10/2017 – 6/2022); furthermore a project on Clay mineral analysis in 2014, titled “Tonmineralanalyse”, which was financed by the FFG (Austrian Research Promotion Agency), based at the Institute for Social Anthropology at the Austrian Academy of Sciences in Vienna; also a strong contribution was given by two Innovation Fund Research projects, based at and financed by the Austrian Academy of Sciences, in particular the projects “Materiality and Material Culture in Tibet” (01/2017 – 10/2019) and “Crafts and Craft Traditions in Tibetan Architecture” (07/2020 – 2022).

This publication is a revised version of the habilitation thesis submitted by the author at the TUW to be approved as university lecturer (Ger. Privat Dozent). Revision, in particular on crafts and building traditions was conducted as part of the project “Crafts and Craft Traditions in Tibetan Architecture”, also funded by the Innovation Fund at the ÖAW.

For financial support to conduct basic research, which allowed to publish this book, many thanks go to the Austrian Academy of Sciences (ÖAW), the Austrian Research Promotion Agency (FFG), the Österreichische Forschungsgemeinschaft (ÖFG), and the Austrian Science Fund (FWF), to the latter in particular for taking over the costs for printing and open access.
